Harding Circle Historic District (SO00372)
Inventory Location: Appendix A, A-161
Map Location: Appendix C, C-10

St. Armand's Key is a 150-acre island, shaped as an oval, located in Sarasota Bay (Gulf of Mexico), west of the mainland, and is situated between Coon Key and Lido Key. St. Armand's consists on commercial and residential structures. The commercial structures border St. Armand's Circle. The residential structures surround the commercial structures in perpendicular and curvilinear streets.

The NRHP nomination, completed in 2000, did not record any historic commercial buildings within St. Armand's Key, and very few residential structures met the fifty-year criteria at that time. Despite the NRHP nomination's period of significance maintaining its time period between 1924 to 1950, ESI recommends that the period of significance be expanded to the 1970s.

Laurel Park Historic District
Inventory Location: Appendix A, A-166
Map Location: Appendix C, C-11

The Laurel Park Historic District is the largest residential NRHP district in Sarasota. It is generally bounded by Morrill Street to the north, Julia Place and Lafayette Court to the east, Devonshire Lane and Brother Geenen Way to the south, and Rawls Avenue on the west. The development is located within the land holdings of Owen Burns, who built the National Register-listed Burns Court district, and "encompasses all and parts of six historic subdivisions." Most of the buildings were constructed between 1920 and 1957, although most development fell off following WWII (Building picked up again in the early 2000s). There are a wide variety of styles, primarily wood frame. ESI does not recommend altering the current nomination boundary but does recommend updating its list of contributing and non-contributing structures.

Overtown Historic District
Inventory Location: Appendix A, A-171
Map Location: Appendix C, C-12

According to the 2002 NRHP nomination, Overtown once held a mixture of single-family residences, commercial buildings, churches, schools, and clubhouses. The period of significance is from 1913 – 1951. Many of these structures have been demolished, and only eighteen (18) structures that predate 1970 remain in the district. Only one structure, built in 1957, was newly recorded in this survey. ESI does not recommend altering the boundaries of the district.

Rigby's La Plaza Historic District[21]

Rigby's La Plaza Historic District is composed of eight structures (six residences and two garage/apartments) located at 1002-138 S. Osprey Avenue, 1744 and 1776 Alta Vista, and 1777 Irving Avenue. According to the 1994 NRHP nomination, all the buildings were constructed in 1926 and "are excellent examples of the Mediterranean Revival Style" (p. 3). They "share a unified plan and association, style and design, date of construction, common building materials and method of construction" (p. 8). ESI does not recommend any alterations or additions to this district.

[21] Rigby's La Plaza District is also listed on the Sarasota Local Register (see page 125).

National Register District Recommendations

The City should consider introducing design guidelines and reviews to existing National Register districts. Without them, alterations are not approved within the historic context of the district. This can result in a contributing structure being altered such that it becomes non-contributing. Depending on alterations or additions, structures that were previously recorded as contributing may now be considered non-contributing (for example, Figure 78 and Figure 77). On the other hand, some owners return their properties back to their original states, such as 1627 Cocoanut Street shown in Figure 30. A set of statewide guidelines is available from the Bureau of Historic Preservation. The guidelines should be based on a consensus definition of the unique features of the area, and what property owners and residents, in concert with the Historic Preservation Commission, would like to retain and reinforce. The City already has a similar review policy in place for individual structures listed on the local or national registers.

The City of Sarasota should consider reviewing each of the historic districts currently listed in the NRHP as there are opportunities for expansion of some of these districts to include structures which have recently come into the 50-year requirement. In general, for each of the districts surveyed as part of this city-wide survey, consideration should be given to the expansion of the period of significance to include all contributing structures that meet the year-built date of 1970, in accordance with NRHP criteria. Examples of the districts to be potentially expanded include the Central-Cocoanut Historic District, the Downtown Historic District, and the Harding Circle Historic District.

Potential National Register of Historic Places Nominations

Some of the surveyed neighborhoods have the potential for NRHP District nomination. It appears that at least seven (7) areas within the city limits contain a sufficient concentration of buildings with satisfactory integrity to meet criteria for listing as a NRHP District and form historic districts. Among those areas are Arlington Park, Bird Key, Granada, Hudson Bayou, Indian Beach/Sapphire Shores, McClellan Park, and the Sarasota School of Architecture Multiple Property Listing.

Arlington Park

Super Pod E and Pod 5-32
Inventory Location: Appendix A, page A-171
Map Location: Appendix C, C-15

As recorded in GAI Consultants Phase IV Report in 2006, the Arlington Park Historic District consists of a multitude of post-World War II houses, most in Mid-Century and Contemporary styles. The proposed district follows the City of Sarasota boundary on the south, jogging along Sunnyside Lane to Webber Street on the south; Bahia Vista Street on the north; S. Tuttle Avenue on the east; and S. Tamiami Trail on the west. It roughly mimics the current boundary of the Arlington Park Neighborhood Association. The neighborhood is a fine example of mid-century development post-World War II. In keeping with the building boom in the aftermath of the war, the changes in Arlington Park reflects the city's growth period and suburbanization. Aerials from 1948 and 1974 reflect similar changes in the city of Sarasota at the end of World War II and the beginning of the 1970s (Figure 80).

The area was formally owned by Mrs. Potter Palmer, who later sold the land to Clinton Foods, which used the land for orange groves. Taking advantage of the building boom, Frank Smith and Rolland King purchased the land from Clinton Foods and by 1956, had drawn blueprints for the residential development. According to Robert Plunket, the original area of Arlington Park is north of Hyde Park (Plunket 2016). Most houses were constructed in the 1950s for middle class families and are close to 1,000 square feet, although some 1920 bungalows are mixed within the area. With so much land and few construction companies in Sarasota at the time, many firms built and sold houses in the South Gate portion of Arlington Park (southeast corner of the 1974 aerial) – so much so that "residents boast that it's rare to find two houses on any one street that have the same floor plan" (Allen 2006). South Gate is considered the first "planned, modern subdivision in the city," despite the fact that only

200 acres of the development fall within the Sarasota city limits (Allen 2006; Neighborhood News 2004). The 1948 aerial depicts most of this land as groves.

In October 2005, the City of Sarasota approved $300,000 for improvements as part of the Arlington Park Neighborhood Action Strategy (APNAS), including decorative lighting installed on Hyde Park and Waldemere Streets from Tuttle to East Avenue, sidewalk improvements, neighborhood signs (Figure 81), and solar speed signs to slow down traffic (Neighborhood News 2006). The neighborhood also includes a park, aptly named Arlington Park. It contains a lap pool, basketball and tennis courts, an indoor gym, a concrete sidewalk for walking and biking throughout, and a dog park (Plunket 2016).

The neighborhood of Arlington Park encompasses multiple subdivisions, including La Linda Terrace, Loma Linda Park, Rustic Lodge, Hyde Park Heights, Hibiscus Park, Southside Park, Norwood Park Sunnyside Park, South Gate, and additional smaller subdivisions. The potential Arlington Park Historic District has one (1) locally designated structure, known as the Hugh K. Browning Home (SO00109), located at 2088 Hawthorne Street and designed in the Tudor Revival style. As of this survey, there are zero (0) NRHP structures listed within the potential district boundary.

The proposed Arlington Park Historic District is significant under Criterion A and C, for its association with the expansion and building boom of the city after World War II and unaltered examples of Mid-Century architecture from the late 1940s to 1970s. The proposed district consists of a variety of contributing historic residential structures built between 1920 and 1970. Nearly three quarters (73%) of the structures were built between 1942 and 1958, and are Masonry and Frame Vernacular, Ranch, and Mid-Century Modern. The proposed district boasts 783 potentially contributing structures, 312 non-contributing structures, and sixty-two (62) with insufficient information to make a determination.

In 1911, Thomas Martin Worcester began dredging and constructing a beautiful home for his wife, Edzell Castle. His wife passed away before the house was finished and Worcester left Sarasota in the mid-1910s. John Ringling purchased Edzell Castle for President Warren Harding as a summer White House. After Harding's death in 1923, Edzell Castle was used by Ringling's sister, Ida Ringling North, until her death in 1950. The location of Edzell Castle now is the site of the Bird Key Yacht Club.

In 1951, the city proposed plans to widen the Ringling Causeway drawbridge, and six years later, construction began. In 1959, Arvida Realty, Inc., a development and construction company owned by Arthur V. Davis, purchased Bird Key. Within the next year, Arvida dredged and filled 180 acres to create 200 acres of land. Arvida planned to create 511 lots with underground utilities, 291 water-front and 220 garden lots. Previously the small island consisted of shallow grass flats and several fish "nurseries." The end result for Bird Key was a subdivision more than ten times the size of the original island (Kelleher 2015; see Appendix D). Sales began in 1960 and lots were sold between $9,000 to $15,000 for "garden" lots and up to $32,000 for lots overlooking the city (Harding Circle Historic District 2000; Orr n.d.).

The proposed Bird Key Historic District was developed for upper-middle class residential development. This area retains its architectural integrity and is significant on the local level in the area of community planning and development; context supports listing as a district under Criterion A and C, as the district is significant based on its association with post-World War II development. Its architectural significance is found in the examples of Mid-Century Modern architecture, clearly depicting the stylistic trends of the 1960s to 1970s. The predominant styles represented on Bird Key are Masonry Vernacular, Ranch, and Mid-Century Modern. The proposed district consists of 161 potentially contributing structures, thirty-three (33) non-contributing, and five (5) structures with insufficient information to determine eligibility to the potential district.

Parts of the southwest portion of Super Pod F
Inventory Location: Appendix A, page A-211

The potential Granada Historic District is located along the southern boundary of the City of Sarasota, and is bounded by Siesta Drive on the north, Flores Avenue on the west, Almeria Avenue on the east, and Bay Road on the south. The potential district already contains five (5) structures listed on the Local Register.

The Granada Subdivision was platted in 1924, and recorded in Plat Book 1, Page 57-58, by the Granada Development Company. Charles Tyson, from Lebanon, Tennessee and his two associates, Nathan Robertson and W. Foxworth, purchased land "amid the cabbage scrub palmetto along Siesta Boulevard" and named the area "Granada." Platted lots were designed for single family houses of varying styles of architecture, such as wood framed bungalows and Spanish styles. The Spanish buildings, including Mission and Mediterranean Revival, were popular throughout Florida during the building boom of the 1920s (City of Sarasota 1989; 1994b; 1994c).

The plat also included wide streets and a park, originally named "Bonita Park," where the Granada Development Company built a centrally located park fountain and green space (City of Sarasota 1994b). The Great Depression halted development of Granada like in most residential developments, and the subdivision was not completed until after World War II.

The proposed Granada Historic District is significant under Criterion A and C, for its association with the southward expansion of Sarasota in the early 1920s and the building boom following World War II. The proposed district contains unaltered examples of Mission, Mediterranean Revival, and Ranch Styles of Architecture from the 1920s to the late 1950s. The proposed district consists sixty-seven (67) potentially contributing structures.

Hudson Bayou
Including Avondale & Seminole Heights
Parts of Super Pod C
Map Location: Appendix C, C-18

A tiny community settled in the area south of Hudson Bayou and north of Phillippi Creek in the 1870s. These pioneers included the Bennett family, who settled (temporarily) in present day McClellon Park the Curtis family settled near Bea Ridge Road near South Tamiami Trail; and Charles Abbe, who arrived in 1874 for his health. Abbe purchased 359 acres in 1876 and forty acres in 1878; and three tracts from Jesse Bennett, near Osprey Avenue and Hillview Street (Grismer 1977). Abbe also opened a post office in Sara Sota (as the community called the area) in 1878. The post office remained in the area until the 1890s (Grismer 1977).

The Avondale subdivision was originally platted in 1913 by the Sarasota Improvement Company, owned by JB Fletcher (Figure 87). In 1924, the Bacheller-Brewer Corporation, owned by Irving Bacheller and Edward Brewer, purchased Avondale, and replatted and expanded the size of the lots and widths of the streets (Sarasota City Commission 1989). Bacheller-Brewer also installed a water system, dredged the Hudson Bayou and built a sea-wall (not visible in Figure 87). By 1927, the Herald reported "that all the lots facing the bayou had been sold" (Grismer 1977; Sarasota City Commission 1989; Herald 1927).

Seminole Heights was platted in 1914 as Bungalow Hill. In 1917, Bungalow Hill became Sarasota Heights when it was incorporated as a separate town, but by 1925, the City of Sarasota absorbed Sarasota Heights into its boundaries (Grismer 1977; Sarasota City Commission 1995).

The area contains sixteen (16) locally designated properties and two (2) properties listed in the NRHP. The only property not locally designated but listed in the NRHP is the 1926 Mediterranean Revival HB Williams House (SO00169) at 1509 Orange Street.

*Structures also listed in the NRHP

While the proposed district does not convey a cohesive architectural trend, it does represent well-preserved architectural resources of a variety of several styles, including Frame Vernacular, Bungalow, Mediterranean Revival, Minimal Traditional, Mission, and Ranch. Major development of this area occurred as Sarasota's development moved southward in the mid-1910s and continued until the Great Depression slowed construction. Development picked back up post-World War II when a housing shortage required more houses for returning soldiers and their families. While development was sporadic in this area, is reflective of development in both Sarasota and nationally. The proposed district boasts 232 potentially contributing structures.

Indian Beach/Sapphire Shores

Pods 2-2 through 2-7
Inventory Location: Appendix A, page A-218
Map Location: Appendix C, C-19

Indian Beach and Sapphire Shores proposed historic district boundary is located south of the Ringling-Caples Historic District and is bound by the Sarasota Bay on the west, N. Tamiami Trail on the east, and Whitaker Bayou on the south.

Figure 89: Indian Beach-Sapphire Shores neighborhood signage. Located at the intersection of Bay Shore Road and N Shore Drive. Multiple signs are located in the neighborhood similar to this one.

The area of Indian Beach and Sapphire Shores dates to the early indigenous tribes of the western coast of Florida. Native Americans used the area for seasonal hunting and fishing grounds. At the time of European exploration, Spanish fisherman established fish camps that supplied mullet and other seafood to Spanish territories in the Caribbean (Angermann 2018).

In the 1840s, during the Second Seminole War, the United States Army established Fort Armistead near the subdivisions. Following the Civil War, a Connecticut doctor named F.H. Williams named the area Indian Beach after all the Native American middens found in the vicinity. The area became known as the Connecticut Colony when many other Connecticut residents followed Dr. Williams to the area. Indian Beach was home to the first Post Office in Sarasota, established in 1906, although its original location is unknown.

C.N. Thompson owned land and his house on what he called "Shell Beach" and sold to Ralph Caples in 1910 (Figure 90). In 1919, the Town of Indian Beach incorporated only to become part of the City of Sarasota six years later, in 1925 (Angermann 2018). In 1911, John Ringling made his seasonal home at the northern end of the City of Sarasota. He then created a basin south of his mansion, Ca'd'Zan, for a turn-around harbor of his large yachts (Angermann 2011).

The City of Sarasota, eyeing expansion reincorporated itself as a city in 1916. In an effort to remain independent, Indian Beach incorporated itself as the Town of Indian Beach in 1916. The Indian Beach Land Company promoted the subdivision as one of "the finest residentials sections of the country." Indian Beach's amenities included artesian water rights, streets, sidewalks, and "easy connections with electric lights and telephones" and boasted that "the electric current that connects the Ringling Brothers and others on the beach with the outside world, runs directly through the center of our properties" (Indian Beach Land Company 1913).

Sapphire Shores, as the neighborhood was later known, was developed in the 1920s. Ringling quickly sold his portion of Sapphire Shores in 1925 to Brywill Realty Company, owned by visionary contractors, Walter Bryon and J.Y. Wilson. Like the realty company, Brywill Circle is named after Bryson and Wilson (Sarasota City Commission 2001). Also, in 1925, the town of Indian Beach was annexed despite residents' objections.

During the Florida Boom of the 1920s, contractors only built three different styles of houses due to a deed restriction: Italianate, Mediterranean, and Moroccan. These structures were built out of hollow tile or cement block, as the deed restricted, and no horses, cattle, or hogs could be kept or raised (NRHP Nomination 2002; Nagirroc nd), only thirteen houses, those for Ringling's friends and family members, were built before the 1926 real estate crash, and all are still standing in the neighborhood (Sokmensuer 2014).

The Indian Beach/Sapphire Shores neighborhoods (and all other associated subdivisions) include a range of architectural styles, from the Mediterranean Revival houses built in the 1920s to the distinctive Mid-Century Modern and Ranch houses of the 1960s. The area also boasts examples of the Sarasota School of Architecture that were constructed by Ralph Twitchell (Plunket 2011, Angermann 2018).

The neighborhoods – which include almost thirty separate subdivisions – are known for their eclectic variety of houses and natural Florida vegetation (Sokmensuer 2014). Along the Bayfront, century old-oaks provide a wonderful canopy for the streets, and along Bay Shore Road, mature palms line the road. The area is also known for having many affluent residents, including active and retired professors from the nearby New College and Ringling College of Art & Design, working professionals, artists, seasonal residents, and some of Sarasota's oldest families (Angermann 2018).

Houses also listed in the NRHP*

The area contains thirteen (13) locally designated properties and six (6) properties listed in the NRHP. It is also located directly south of the Ringling-Caples Historic District. Two (2) addresses not locally designated but listed in the NRHP are the Bay Haven School (SO00367), constructed in 1926, and the JG Whitfield Estate (SO00139), built in 1925. Both structures are in the Mediterranean Revival Style of Architecture.

The neighborhood of Indian Beach/Sapphire Shores encompasses multiple subdivisions, including Sapphire Heights, Indian Beach, Bay Haven, Sarasota Bay Park, and additional smaller subdivisions. The proposed district boasts 651 contributing (or eligible) structures, 154 non-contributing (or ineligible) structures, and forty-eight (48) structures with insufficient information to determine eligibility.

The Indian Beach/Sapphire Shores is significant under Criterion A and C, for its association with both the early development of Sarasota's housing infrastructure and the expansion and building boom of the city after World War II and unaltered examples of Mediterranean Revival and Contemporary architecture, such as Mid-Century Modern, Minimal Traditional, and Ranch. The proposed district also contains almost 200 Frame and Masonry Vernacular structures. The period of construction for these houses' dates between the mid-1920s to 1970s.

McClellan Park

Northwest portion of Super Pod F
Inventory Location: Appendix A, page A-244
Map Location: Appendix C, C-20

McClellan Park is located south of downtown Sarasota, between Seminole Drive on the north, Oriole Drive on the west, Cunliff Lane on the south, and S. Osprey Avenue. Developed by sisters Katherine and Daisy McClellan in 1915, they designed and platted the neighborhood in curvilinear streets, small parks, and way finding masonry piers.

The first family to live in the area known as McClellan Park were the Bennett family from New York. Their seventeen-year old son was sick with tuberculosis and doctors advised the family to seek the tropical climate of South Florida to cure his sickness. In response, the Bennett family filed a homestead claim in 1870, south of downtown Sarasota. After their son recovered, the Bennetts returned to New York (Grismer 1977).

From 1915 to 1916, the McClellans – hailing from Northampton, Massachusetts – developed fifty-six (56) acres. A yacht basin was dredged and a clubhouse, located at the corner of Seminole and Sioux Drive, was constructed with an outdoor tennis court (no longer extant). Inspired by the Native American midden the clubhouse is rumored to be built on, the streets in McClellan Park took names of Native American tribes. Most houses had a direct view of Sarasota Bay and a private yacht basin at the end of Hyde Park Street (until Paradise Shores were constructed in the 1940s), and lots sold between $800 and $2,500 (Bubil 2016; Shank nd). The area included its own shell roads, landscaped gardens, arched entrance pergola, and a private well. Landscape architects were hired to design the park and roadways were curved over the hilly landscape (Monroe et al 1977).

Initially, the new subdivision did not do well and not many lots were sold. In 1923, Edward Brewer purchased the land north of McClellan Park, Avondale, and ninety-three (93) acres to the east known as Avon Heights. The Bacheller-Brewer Corporation purchased McClellan Park in its entirety, apart from the houses owned by the McClellan sisters.

The proposed McClellan Park Historic District is significant under Criterion A and C, for its association with the southward expansion of Sarasota in the early 1900s and building boom of the city after World War II and contained unaltered examples of Frame Vernacular, Mediterranean and Mission styles, along with Contemporary styles (such as Minimal Traditional and Ranch) from the 1920s until the 1960s. A contributing factor to the district is its curvilinear street design, unique to this subdivision, which is visible in the 1929 Sanborn map of Sarasota, Florida. McClellan Park boundary includes fifty-seven (57) contributing structures to the proposed district.

Sarasota School of Architecture Multiple Resource Group
These structures are found throughout the inventory.
Map Location: Appendix C, C-21

While most of these structures are found throughout Sarasota and not in one district, the nationally known Sarasota School of Architecture is worthy of a distinction. This nomination includes the ordinary and significant works of this style and numerous resources were recorded during this survey. It should be noted that the previous FMSF form did not include the Sarasota School Style and therefore many of the previously recorded structures were given Mid-Century Modern, Bauhaus, or International style designations. "Sarasota School" was typed in under the "Other" field on those forms. Where possible, ESI changed the style to reflect the Sarasota School Style as its one and true style. Not all structures recorded as "no changes" were assessed from their previous recordation. With that said, many structures listed in previous reports have been demolished. It is suggested that all newly recorded contributing structures be added to the Multiple Resource Group and all structures that have been determined ineligible or demolished be removed from the Multiple Resource Group nomination.

All contributing structures retain their architectural features and characteristics and are significant on the local and international level. These structures are eligible for the NRHP under Criterion A and C, for their significant contribution to the Mid-Century Modern movement and distinctive characteristics of the method of construction and high artistic value.

One of the criteria for this survey was to record Sarasota School of Architectural resources constructed up to 1975, five years past the survey criteria for all other resources. Unfortunately, the survey team was unable to identify any structures with distinguishable Sarasota School features, other than those previously recorded or already included on the "Sarasota School of Architecture Driving Tour," Tour Sarasota Architecture pamphlet; listed in John Howey's The Sarasota School of Architecture: 1941 – 1966; or in William Moffitt's Survey from 1977. Reasons as to why no additional structures other than those already recorded were found could be due to major alterations to structures, wholesale demolitions, or overbuilds as they were not protected due to age and lack of previous recordation.

In the 2015 NRHP Nomination, the period of significance established for the style spanned from 1941 to 1977. The nomination also stated that "only a few architects like Jack West, Tim Seibert, and William and Ralph Zimmerman continued to work actively in Sarasota during the 1960s and 1970s" (Shiver 2015). In the Sarasota Architectural Foundation's 2001 documentary An American Legacy: Sarasota School of Architecture, Tim Seibert states, "What you see [constructed] today maybe good architecture, but I do not see it has any real connection to the so called 'Sarasota School of Architecture;' and I myself would certainty not try to bring that back" (Sarasota Architecture Foundation 2001).

*Listed only on the NRHP
Listed on both the NRHP and Local Register

During this survey, 99 structures were surveyed, including three (3) NRHP-listed structures and seven (7) listed on the local register. One (1) of these structures is listed both on the National and Local Register (See Table 12). See Appendix C, C-22 for visual representation of the locations of for the Sarasota School of Architecture resources.

Local Register of Historic Places

Existing Locally Designated Districts: Bayfront Historic District, Hillview Art Colony, Mazie Luzier Bungalows, Rigby's La Plaza District, Second Street District, and the Van Wezel Estate District.
Existing Locally Designated Sites: See Appendix C, C-4, and Appendix F.

Local nomination requires owner approval, and a nomination can only be submitted by the owner or by a majority vote of the members of a historic preservation board. Sarasota's zoning code provides designation standards for historic structures and sites, historic districts, archeological sites and districts, and historic signs. The criteria for each are as follows (Sarasota Zoning Code Section IV-805):

(1) Historic structures or sites. A structure or site is of historic significance if it possesses integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship and association, and if it:
   a. Exemplifies or reflects the broad cultural, political, economic or social history of the city, the county, the state, or the United States of America;
   b. Is associated with events which have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our local, state or national history;
   c. Is associated with the life of a person who has played a significant role in our local, state or national history;
   d. Embodies the distinctive visible characteristics of an architectural style or period, or a method of construction;
   e. Represents the work of a designer or builder whose work has been generally acknowledged; or
   f. Is a reconstructed building when accurately executed in a suitable environment and presented in a dignified manner as part of a restoration master plan and when no other building or association has survived.

(2) Historic districts. A district is of historic significance when it possesses integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship and association, and if it:
   a. Represents a significant entity whose components may lack individual distinction;
   b. Represents a geographically defined area which contains structures, sites, objects, and spaces linked historically through location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling and association; or
   c. Represents a geographically defined entity whose individual structural components collectively convey a sense of time and place in history (which may relate to one or more periods in history).

(3) Archaeological sites and districts. A site or district is of archaeological significance, and if it:
   a. Has yielded or is likely to yield significant information relating to prehistory or history; or
   b. Contains any subsurface remains of historical or archaeological importance or any unusual ground formations of archaeological significance.

(4) Historic signs. Any sign, regardless of its age, which satisfies one or more of the following criteria:
   a. The sign is significant to the history of the city, including, but not limited to, the character of the city as a seaside community, tourist attraction, or cultural center;
   b. The sign is unique, notably aesthetic, or creative so as to make a significant contribution as a work of art;
   c. The sign merits recognition as an important example of technology, craftsmanship, materials or design of the period in which it was constructed and may no longer [sic] be economically feasible to produce or manufacture the sign today; or

d. The sign is incorporated into the architecture of a building, so as to be essential to the integrity of the building.

If the owner does not object to the nomination, or less than a majority of owners in a proposed district, the historic preservation board conducts a public hearing. If the board finds that the resource meets the listed criteria, the nomination is approved and forwarded to the city commission, along with a staff analysis of the designation. Following a second public hearing, the commission can approve, approve with conditions, or deny the designation. If approved or approved with conditions, the designation is documented in the form of an ordinance. The board also has the power to designate a historic sign.

ESI recomends all previously recommended potential NRHP districts be considered for the local register, either together with the NRHP designation or separate as just a local district. A local historic district or locally designated individual properties is one more step, both as a separate tool or in addition to, the NRHP designation. The creation of a local district or property can often provide more protection to a historic resource that either Federal or State designation. The main tool of a local listing is the preservation ordinance.

Bayfront Historic District
Inventory Location: Appendix A, A-1
Map Location: Appendix C, C-23

In the 1930s, the City of Sarasota purchased the current thirty-seven-acre area for the creation of a bayfront park and civic center. The Bayfront Historic District includes multiple civic institutions and public use structures and facilities, originally containing shuffle board, lawn bowling, and tennis facilities. Today, the district still maintains its original use, housing an open recreational field with the following structures still remaining at their original location: the Sarasota Garden Club (1960), the former Sarasota Chamber of Commerce Building (1956), the Chidsey Building (1937), the Sarasota Art Association Hall (1948), the Hazzard Fountain (1940), and the Municipal Auditorium/Recreation Club (1937). All of these structures, minus Hazzard Fountain, are listed on the Sarasota Local Register.

ESI recommends that this district be expanded to include the Van Wezel Performing Arts Hall building, SO07080, despite its location west of the current district along North Tamiami Trail. The Van Wezel, constructed in 1969, meets the year-built criteria and serves a similar purpose to the other structures located within the Bayfront.

Hillview Art Colony

Known for its world-renowned art culture, Sarasota flourished as a haven for artists during the 1920s and 1930s. In 1950, the Sarasota Art Association established art schools throughout the city and had over 500 members. In conjunction with the Ringling School of Art, "Sarasota became established as an artist's colony…and catered to well over 1,300 art students" (City of Sarasota 1993). The Amagansett Art School is one of the last remaining examples of an art school in Sarasota and the Tracy House remains a fine example of a combination house and studio within Sarasota.

Both the Amagansett Art School and Tracy House are excellent examples of their architectural style. ESI does not recommend any alterations or additions to the district.

Mazie Luzier Bungalows

Constructed in 1925, the Mazie Luzier Bungalows are excellent examples of their style, "California Bungalow," in Sarasota constructed during the Florida Land Boom. These structures are representative of their time period and the style of houses constructed south of the Hudson Bayou. Both structures maintain their overall character and style with little alterations. The bungalows were also home to Mazie Luzier, their namesake, as she was the oldest child of the first postmaster of Sarasota (City of Sarasota 1994d). ESI does not suggest any alterations or additions to the district.

Rigby's La Plaza

Rigby's La Plaza Historic District is also listed on the NRHP, and ESI does not recommend any alterations or additions to the district. For more information, see page 95.

Second Street District

The original Second Street District consisted of four structures, but the structure located at 1243 Second Street has recently been demolished (circa 2006). This district is near downtown Sarasota and these houses were owned by the first pioneers in the area. These structures are representative of their time period and the style appropriate for the early 1900s; therefore, ESI does not recommend and alterations or additions to this district.

Van Wezel Estate

The Van Wezel Estate was the first house constructed on Lido Key and was built by one of the more famous architects in Sarasota, Thomas Reid Martin. Both structures on the site remain and are minimally altered examples of the time period and style of construction. ESI does not recommend any alterations or additions to this district.

Conservation and Overlay Districts

In addition to historic districts, the City of Sarasota has both conservation and overlay districts. A conservation district is a type of overlay district. The City has defined conservation districts as "areas with a visually interesting stock of older buildings with some common characteristics such as age, style, size, and use, some of which may be simpler utilitarian structures, without a great deal of architectural embellishments, or structures with a high degree of significance that have been significantly altered over the years" (Sarasota City Plan – Historic Preservation Plan, p.HP-5). Special Public Interest Overlay Districts, on the other hand, are much broader in scope. According to section VI-901 of the Sarasota Zoning Code, their purpose is to "protect and enhance certain specific lands, uses and structures which, by virtue of their type or location, have characteristics which are distinct from lands and structures outside" the district.

Newtown is currently the only conservation district in the City. The Historic Preservation Plan provides for its protection (and any other future conservation districts) through zoning regulations, limiting alterations, demolitions, uses, etc., as appropriate to the district. It is not, however, included in section VI-901 with the other overlay districts. To maintain consistency within the code, Newtown should be included with the others. There are seven (additional) overlay districts, each with different intents and purposes and listed below:

- Fruitville Gateway Corridor was created to reduce traffic, minimize visual clutter, and preserve the aesthetic value of the corridor.
- Costal Islands Overlay is to protect the "environmentally sensitive and fragile," area by limiting impervious surfaces and additional height and density, as well as generally protecting the undeveloped areas.
- Ringling Overlay provides for the integrity, function, and long-term growth of the Ringling College of Art and Design.
- Housing Authority Overlay balances the growth needs of the housing authority while preserving the surrounding community.
- North Trail Overlay is voluntary. It provides standards to encourage human scale development and a wide variety of transit options.
- Laurel Park Overlay is to "enhance communication between a developer or landowner and residents within the […] neighborhood when a building permit or administrative site plan is proposed."
- Rosemary Overlay seeks to increase the residential element of the neighborhood.

The city should be commended for the breadth of protections provided by overlay districts and should continue to utilize them. Overlay and/or conservation districts are gaining national popularity. Non-local examples encompass a wide range, including Seattle's Pike/Pine Conservation District Overlay District, which regulates the scale of infill and encourages design sympathetic to small businesses and the retention of character-defining features.[22] San Francisco's legacy business registry provides educational and promotional assistance to the businesses.[23] This registry focuses exclusively on the business, as opposed to the structure in which it is housed. The Special Clinton District in New York City is an overlay that seeks to preserve the area of the residential neighborhood that borders on the business and tourist Midtown area.[24] Closer to Sarasota is Miami's Midtown Overlay District, which allows for more flexibility in design and unique/innovate development.[25]

Newtown Conservation Historic District

Pods 2-9 & 2-10, 2-12 thru 2-14, and 2-16 & 2-17

In accordance with GAI's Phase II Historical Resources Survey in 2004, the area between the Seaboard Coastline, east towards Washington Blvd (US Route 301), south towards Martin Luther King, Jr. Way, and north to Myrtle Avenue (coinciding with the City of Sarasota boundary) is known as Newtown within the Amaryllis Park neighborhood. Extensive research has been undertaken on the neighborhood, the most recent and well documented is Newtown Alive: Courage, Dignity, and Determination by Rosalyn Howard, Ph.D, and Vickie Oldham, M.F.A.

Figure 102: Examples of 12 display signs throughout Newtown. These signs include details about the business district, historic architecture, and education in the district.

In 2009, the Landmarks Preservation Commission found the neighborhood did not contain necessary integrity to be nominated to the NRHP, but City Staff did recommend it be added as a conservation district. It is included as such within the 2008 Historic Preservation Plan but is not included with other overlay districts within the zoning code.

If there is future consideration for a NRHP District, ESI recommends that the district boundary adhere to Figure 103. This boundary does not follow the current Newtown Conservation Historic District boundary but provides for a denser district and the southern boundary encompasses all only the contributing structures along the southern side of Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard.

The previous survey recorded structures with a year-built date up to 1948; as of this survey, all structures up to 1970 were recorded. This potential district meets NRHP Criteria A for its association with planning and development, as well as the social and cultural history of the African-American community of Sarasota. This area also meets Criteria C due to the collection of Vernacular, including Frame and Masonry; Bungalow; modest Mediterranean Revival; and Contemporary Styles, including Mid-Century Modern and Ranch Styles. One of the display signs in the neighborhood and in Figure 102 details fifteen (15) significant building contractors, skilled craftsmen, and tradesmen that have houses built in the neighborhood. Both the historic Booker High School and Boys & Girls Club of Sarasota structures have been demolished but replaced with more modern designed structures. For this proposed boundary, 426 structures were determined to be contributing; 104 non-contributing; and twelve (12) were determined to have insufficient information to determine eligibility.

Following the completion of final reporting and printing, the City of Sarasota passed Ordinance 20-5310, establishing the Newtown Conservation Historic Overlay District (NCHOD), on Tuesday, January 21, 2020. The consultant, in consultation with city staff, has provided revised recommendations based upon the recent code update. This revised recommendation includes a new boundary map, additional surveyed resources, and a revised inventory. Please see Addendum A for the revised boundary and inventory for the NCHOD and potential Local Register District boundary.

North Tamiami Trail

During World War II, Florida was one of the most altered states. Over a quarter of a million Floridians joined the war effort, either through the draft or volunteerism. Dozens of military bases were constructed throughout the state as weather and large acres of undeveloped land provided a perfect military training environment. Prior to the war, "auto camping," where travelers slept in tents, was the most convenient and affordable way for travels to rest. The war resulted in a population increase in tourists and residents throughout Florida. Motor vehicle registration skyrocketed, and the price of gasoline and cars fell. Auto travel started to replace railroad travel. The need for more hospitable lodging along major highways increased.

Motels, a combined word from "motorist" and "hotel," offered convenient rooms for travelers looking for inexpensive lodging could rest and relax while on vacation. From 1939 to 1960, over 35,000 motels were built in the United States. The North Trail became an important roadway, as it was the only major highway running along the west coast of Florida that connected east and west coasts of Florida at the time of its construction. In the 1950s, the north portion of Tamiami Trail in Sarasota began to develop an auto-centric commercial atmosphere, including motels.

Opened on April 25, 1928, the Tamiami Trail was once a part of a very active US Highway 41 but following the completion of I-75 in the early 1980s, many of the "destination businesses slowly began to deteriorate." To combat this, the City has adopted the voluntary North Trail Overlay District, with the goal of "transform[ing] the image of the North Trail into a true, definable, and marveled place known for its historical, cultural, educational, civic, neighborhood, and commercial areas" (Sarasota Zoning Code VI-910(a)). The overlay district extends on either side of N. Tamiami Trail from University Parkway to 10th Street.

The overlay includes a range of standards, including limitations on height; minimum and maximum front, side, and rear setbacks; design guidelines for corner architecture and signage; pedestrian-oriented spaces, including sidewalks and habitable space (commercial and residential spaces); and parking. All of these guidelines are designed to re-scale the area for pedestrians – as opposed to vehicles – and provide gathering spaces and key focal points of the corridor.

While no contiguous district is present at this time, N. Tamiami Trail is significant for its auto-centric design and the numerous motels that exist along the highway. ESI recommends that this be taken into consideration and the historic structures that are marked as contributing should be given protection as to not lose these structures (and the overall historic function of N. Tamiami Trail), through alteration or demolition.

VIII. FURTHER ACTIONS

Recommendations in the previous section include actions that can immediately be taken by the city or nearly so, with minimal further work. There are, however, other preservation tactics which may require more effort from the city for instance, re-zoning. ESI recommends the following further actions, with the understanding that they are more involved and perhaps less straightforward than those already noted.

Areas of Interest

There are neighborhoods in the City of Sarasota which may be eligible for the NRHP but, for various reasons, cannot be recommended for nomination in this report. It should not be assumed that they do not warrant attention and/or protection because the team does not now consider them eligible. More research should be undertaken to determine the potential for these neighborhoods to be listed in the NRHP or listed as local Conservation Districts. Resident involvement in these projects would be beneficial for several reasons. Some long-term residents may have institutional knowledge, and an involved community often takes on the bulk of the work, resulting in (1) less man-hours required by the city, and (2) greater community ownership.

Alta Vista

Pods 5-20, 5-24 thru 5-26

The neighborhood of Alta Vista is roughly bound by Novus Street to the north, US 301/Washington Avenue to the west, S Tuttle Avenue to the east, and Bahia Vista Street to the south. It includes some of the most interesting structures in Sarasota, including Sarasota High School and the Sarasota School Style addition to the high school (SO00416, Figure 48 and SO00416A , Figure 46), Payne Park, and the Sarasota School Style building addition to Alta Vista Elementary (SO02502, Figure 47). The residential structures in the neighborhood consist of 1920s Bungalows and mid-century Florida Ranch Style houses under an established tree canopy. Despite the neighborhood boundary, the eligible structures for this possible district do not include Payne's Park. This area should have further research to determine if it is eligible for listing as a National Register or Local Register District.

Table 20: Locally designated structures in the Alta Vista neighborhood.

FMSF Site ID	Name	Address	Year Built	Style
SO06345	Franklin Redd House	823 School Avenue	1930	Frame Vernacular

Bayou Oaks

Pods 3-2 thru 3-9; 2-11

This neighborhood is parallel to the Indian Beach/Sapphire Shores proposed district, directly to the east of N Tamiami Trail. It is additionally bound by University Parkway on the north, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Way on the south, and the city boundary and Seminole Gulf Railroad on the east. Bayou Oaks contains post-war and Mid-Century architectural styles, including Frame and Masonry Vernacular, Bungalows, and few, but mentionable, Ranch and Mediterranean Revival/Mission style houses. The northern portion (north of 41st Street) of Bayou Oaks was sparsely developed prior to the mid to late-1950s. South of 41st Street, the significant development period falls between the late-1920s through the 1940s. With more historic research, this area may meet the qualifications to be considered potentially eligible for the creation of a conservation district.

FMSF Site ID	Name	Address	Year Built	Style
SO04626	Sparkman Property – Home of Sarasota Succulent Society	1310 38th Street	1938	Minimal Traditional

Bellevue Terrace

Pods 5-27 thru 5-30

The Bellevue Terrace neighborhood is located to the east of Alta Vista and is bound by Novus Court on the north, Lockwood Ridge Road on the east, Bahia Vista Street on the south, and South Tuttle Avenue on the west. The southern portion of the neighborhood, along Bahia Vista, had sparse development in 1925, with fifteen (15) structures in the Frame Vernacular or Bungalow Style constructed.

The potential Bellevue Terrace Historic District may be significant under Criterion A and C for its association with the expansion and building boom of the city after World War II and unaltered examples of Contemporary architecture from the mid-1950s to 1970s. The area consists of a variety of contributing historic residential structures with a minority of structures built in the mid-1920s (less than twenty) and the majority built between 1954 and 1960, consisting of Mid-Century Modern, Ranch, and Masonry Vernacular. Many of the styles are consistently repeated throughout the neighborhood. With additional historic research, this area may meet the qualifications to be considered eligible for listing as a National Register or Local Register District.

Carolina Estates

Pod 5-11

Carolina Estates developed in three "units" beginning in 1959 (Sarasota County Plat Book 10, pages 87). Neighbors noted the area was once the most desirable neighborhood in Sarasota, and that original signage (located on north and south sides and median of 7th street off N Lockridge Ridge Road) was damaged and removed some years prior to the survey. Most of the structures are in good condition (117 good; 30 fair; 1 excellent) and the majority were constructed between 1958 and 1961. Masonry Vernacular structures comprise the bulk of the neighborhood, with some Ranches, Mid-Century Modern houses, and Frame Vernaculars. The street layout clearly shows it was a single development, but no information regarding the developer and/or early residents has been discovered. With more historic research, this area may meet the qualifications to be considered potentially eligible for the creation of a conservation district. As of this survey, the vast majority – 85%, or 125 resources – would contribute to the potential district.

Gardens of Ringling Park

Pods 5-14 and Super Pod D

The neighborhood of Gardens of Ringling Park has an irregular boundary: it is bound by Ringling Boulevard on the north, south on Euclid Avenue S, east on Martin Boulevard, south on S Tuttle Avenue, east along the Seminole Gulf railroad, north on S Shade Avenue, curves following S Pelican Drive, and north on S Lime Avenue to Ringling Boulevard. This neighborhood includes multiple plats including Terrace Gardens, Ringling Park, Golfview, Woodbury, Patricia Manor and Paver Park Estates.

Designed by Martin Paver, Paver Park Estates was platted in 1950 as one of the first post-war subdivisions. The Pavers visited Sarasota in 1949 and moved from Long Island within the year, attracted to the south Florida climate. Paver Construction Company began building the subdivision over the following years adding two additional sections in 1953 and 1954. Houses originally cost about $10,000 and were two-bedroom, one-bathroom houses with vinyl floors, birch kitchen cabinets and a screened porch.

These subdivisions were platted between 1950 through 1956 and most of the buildings were built between 1951 through 1956 and predominantly represent the Ranch style. According to an owner interview, some of the designs were modeled after Frank Lloyd Wright plans although this has not been substantiated but with more research, may prove true. With additional historic research, this area may meet the qualifications to be considered eligible for listing as a National Register or Local Register District.

Glen Oaks

Glen Oaks is located between North Beneva Road, Calliandra Drive, 17th Street, and Circus Boulevard, and is directly west of the Bobby Jones Golf Club. After the Ringling Circus left the City of Sarasota in 1959, the Paver Brothers developed the Glen Oaks Subdivision on the former site of the circus Winter Quarters (LaHurd 2012). The subdivision was constructed on a railyard for both the Atlantic Coast Line and Seaboard Air Line tracks (Figure 105). Early development phases were constructed in the southeast area, near Calliandra Drive and Circus Boulevard.

Two phases (or "units," as noted in the plat maps) were platted prior to 1970: unit 1, in 1962; and units 3 through 6 from 1963 to 1972. The Glen Oaks subdivision, at the time of this survey, includes twenty-eight (28) Ranch, eighteen (18) Masonry Vernacular, two (2) Mid-Century Modern, one (1) Neo-Classical and one (1) Frame Vernacular Style of structures. Glen Oaks contains forty-two (42) contributing, or potentially eligible, structures; four (4) structures that are non-contributing, or not eligible; and four (4) structures that are considered to have insufficient information to determine eligibility. Because of the time of construction, 1962 – 1972, the entire subdivision stands to become potentially eligible, based on the NRHP fifty-year age requirement, within the next five years. To discourage renovations that alter the resources overall NRHP eligibility, it is recommended that the Glen Oaks neighborhood be surveyed in its entirety as a preemptive action.

Harbor Acres

Western portion of Super Pod C

This neighborhood was developed following World War II after dredging and the construction of a seawall was completed. One hundred and seventy-one (171) lots were sold in 1951, starting at $2,500 and ranging to $10,000 for those on the waterfront. The houses originally constructed in Harbor Acres were "all custom Florida ranches, low and long, mostly done in white and pastels." According to Sarasota Magazine, many of the houses have been updated and enlarged over the years and a very few of the original houses are left (Plunket 2015).

Harbor Acres is found west of Flower Drive along Hillview Drive and Harbor Drive. The neighborhood has been home to many famous Sarasotans: Jane Bancroft Cook, owner of the Wall Street Journal and namesake of Cook's Hall at New College; Ken Thompson, Sarasota's legendary city manager for 38 years; Robert Nelson, owner of the local TV station WWSB; Lillian Burns, daughter of early developer Owen Burns; and Gil Waters, developer and former city commissioner.

Fewer than half of the structures in Harbor Acres were constructed in or before 1970 (78 of 176 total structures, or 44%). Of these, only approximately two thirds are contributing, or potentially eligible (49 contributing, 29 non-contributing, and 2 considered to have insufficient information to determine eligibility). Due to the lack of regulations, the neighborhood has been significantly altered and is not eligible for the NRHP. 1355 Harbor Drive (1952; Figure 107) is the only excellent structure recorded in Harbor Acres and serves as a fine example of what was originally constructed throughout. Many examples of demolition by overbuilding exist in this neighborhood.

Lake Ridge

Pod 5-7

Composing of ninety-eight (98) structures, the Lake Ridge Subdivision was platted and approved by the City of Sarasota in 1962. Most structures are in the Contemporary, Masonry Vernacular, Ranch, and Mid-Century Modern styles of architecture and were built between 1962 and 1970. Of the ninety-eight structures, eighty (80) are contributing or eligible, fifteen (15) are non-contributing or not eligible due to alterations and/or additions, and three (3) were listed as having insufficient information to determine eligibility for a district. With additional historic research, this area may meet the qualifications to be considered eligible for listing as a National Register or Local Register District.

Lido Key and Lido Shores

Super Pod B

Starting in 1923, the islands of Cedar Point, St. Armand's Key, and Lido Key in Sarasota Bay were dredged and filled by Owen Burns' dredging company to form a group of smaller islands called the Cerol Islands. Three dredges were used to shaped mangrove islands into solid land and created a deep-water channel along the Sarasota Bay (Grismer 1977). Fill from creating New Pass channel was then used to extend the northern part of Lido Key to create Lido Shores (Sarasota City Commission 2008). John Ringling Estates, Inc. was platted in 1926 and Lido Key took its current shape and was prepared to become a lavish and splendid development in the Gulf. Lido, Italian for beach, retained the Mediterranean theme so prized by John Ringling (Kelleher 2015). Ringling Causeway Bridge, built by the Burns Construction Company, opened in 1926 and allowed full access to St. Armond's, Lido Key, Lido Shores, and (eventually) Bird Key.

The combination of the Florida Real Estate Bust and the Great Depression ended the dreams of creating the island oasis for both Ringling and Burns. In 1940, the Lido Beach Casino formally opened. A WPA project and supported by the Sarasota Chamber of Commerce, the casino was built on land formally owned by John Ringling. It had a fresh water swimming pool, cabanas, bathhouses, a ballroom, and a restaurant, and was one of the most modern in the country. Designed by Ralph Twitchell, father of the renowned Sarasota School of Architecture, the building was demolished in 1969 (Grismer 1977; Spencer 2009).

The Ringling Causeway was destroyed in 1959 to make way for a more modern bridge. The 1959 bridge was also demolished, and the drawbridge was replaced in 2003 by a sixty-five-foot-tall bridge, reducing the delays caused by the drawbridge (Wright 2003; LaHurd 2014).

Between 1949 and 1951, Philip Hiss, an architect of the Sarasota Style, purchased seventy-five acres of Lido Shores – almost the entire area – and it became known as "his little colony on Lido Shores." Hiss began building houses in 1954: a "fine and diverse…exhibit of modern American architecture" (House + Home 1954). These houses were priced at $15,000 to $60,000 and the buyers were "a former vice president of a big US corporation, the owner of a hotel chain, a radio station operator a newspaper publisher, a president of a major engineering corporation and an aviation industry official" (House + Home 1954). In 1953, Hiss hired Paul Rudolph (another Sarasota School architect) to design the "Umbrella House." The house is now listed on both the Sarasota Local Register and on the National Register of Historic Places.

A pocket of pre- and post-World War II houses exist on Lido, especially along Ben Franklin Boulevard and Boulevard of the Presidents S, south of Tyler Drive to Taft Drive. These houses mostly consist of Frame and Masonry Vernacular styles, as well as the Ranch structures. Of note, two Sarasota School of Architecture structures are found on Tyler Drive. Like Harbor Acres, Lido Key and Lido Shores were comprehensively developed in a pattern that is often seen in NRHP districts, but extensive demolitions, alterations, and additions in the neighborhoods have significantly impacted their integrity such that they are no longer eligible.

On Lido Shores, a pocket of Sarasota School structures still exists, although many of the original buildings have been completely destroyed or so altered that the historic structure is no longer visible (see Appendix C, C-21). The area appears to meet the criteria to be a conservation district, as a group of "structures with a high degree of significance that [has] been significantly altered over the years" (Sarasota City Plan – Historic Preservation Plan, p. HP-5).

Siesta Key

Super Pod F

Known by multiple names throughout history including Clam Island, Muscle Island, and Palm Island, Siesta Key (as it is known now) was a small island in the Gulf at the channel entrance of Sarasota.

In the late 1870s, "Captain" Louis Roberts and his wife, Ocean Hansen, homesteaded on Sarasota Key. Establishing himself as a fisherman, Roberts learned that catering to the tourism industry was very lucrative. In 1906, he expanded his house and named it the Roberts Hotel. Henry Higel, an early arrival to Sarasota, established himself by purchasing the town dock and supporting local efforts to modernize. Higel renamed the key from Sarasota to Siesta and organized the Siesta Land Company with Captain Roberts and E.M. Arbogast. Together, they platted the town of Siesta and began an intensive advertising and marketing campaign. Roberts renamed his hotel to Siesta Hotel and it became well-known due to its location.

A financial depression tapered development and Siesta was replatted in 1912. Despite the booming tourist business on Siesta Key, few people wanted to inhabit the island due to its remote location and access only by boat. From 1911 to 1913, Higel dredged three canals and bayous and built bath houses and a 150-foot dock. Finally, in 1917, the Siesta Bridge opened, connecting the main land to the island and more significant development of the island began (Grismer 1977).

During the 1950s, National Geographic magazine asserted that Siesta Key's beach was one of the four most beautiful in the world. Home to writers and artist such as Pulitzer Prize-winner MacKinlay Kantor, E.B. White, Jerry Farnsworth, and First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt. Siesta had a population of 500 residents, a public beach, and a Siesta Key Pavilion designed by Tim Seibert, a renowned Sarasota School of Architecture architect (LaHurd 2018).

Siesta Key contains historical resources ranging from 1909 to 1970. 18 resources appear to have been overbuilt and therefore have lost all historic significance. Siesta Key contains one (1) NRHP resource, the Revere Quality House (SO02373); and contains six (6) locally registered structures:

Table 24: Siesta Key locally designated structures.

FMSF Site ID	Name	Address	Year Built
SO02373	Revere Quality House	100 Ogden Boulevard	1947
SO05951	Remsen House/Garage	3459 Seagrape Drive	1937
SO05971	Williams House	3406 Higel Drive	1920
SO05968	Sprague House	129 Edmondson Drive	1939
SO05969	Morrison House	115 Edmondson Drive	1940
SO02438	Cocoon House	3575 Bayou Louise Lane	1951

Of the 96 structures recorded on Siesta Key, 54 are contributing or eligible, 28 are non-contributing or not eligible due to alterations and/or additions, and 14 were listed as having insufficient information to determine eligibility for a district.

Unlike Bird Key or Lido Key, Siesta Key was developed throughout the early 1900s and up until the 1970s. Due to major alterations and additions, 18 buildings have been marked as demolished due to overbuilding, including alterations that have caused the structure to lose all characteristics and features of its original construction. Because of the alterations and additions, the neighborhood does not retain the necessary integrity required for a historic district, but may meet the qualifications for a conservation district, given the area's history and subsequent alterations.

Tuttle Heights

Pod 5-6

Located west off of Tuttle between 8th and 10th Streets, Tuttle Heights is located in the cul-de-sac of Bruce Lane. The sixteen (16) structures were constructed between 1963 and 1972 (only one was built after the 1970 cutoff date) and are primarily Ranches with some Masonry and Frame Vernaculars. One (1) structure is fair, two (2) are excellent, and the rest are in good condition. A resident interview suggests Tuttle Heights has been home to prominent Sarsotans, and the neighborhood likely will be eligible for the NRHP in the next three years when all of the properties meet the 50 year standard.

Ancillary Features

Buildings are not the only element that contribute to the character of a neighborhood. Other components include setbacks, landscaping, parcel size and shape, and ground plans,such as City Beautiful or post war suburban plans. These elements, therefore, should be also be taken into consideration when discussing a neighborhood and its character-defining features.

Several neighborhoods in the city have significant tree canopies, such as oak trees in Alta Vista and royal palms in Indian Beach. The city currently requires permits for tree removal and mitigation for tree removal associated with new construction (see ordinances 17-5205 and 16-5173).

It is critical that Sarasota promote preservation in the city. Without property owner and community support, any preservation program will be hampered and delayed, or even doomed to fail. Physical changes made under the auspices of public agencies and departments, or by private property owners, should not compromise the historical integrity of buildings or their settings. A review of physical features should be pursued to insure their compatibility with Sarasota's historic resources.

The introduction of unharmonious elements or removal or character-defining features within a historic setting may destroy the integrity of a historic resource. Historic architectural controls are merely a special kind of zoning and should be considered a reasonable regulation of property applied in the interest of a community. Zoning is the most common historic preservation tool, and one that presents significant dangers to historic resources if it is wrongfully applied.

Zoning

Special care should be paid to areas that are potentially going to be rezoned, particularly if the designated scale, mass, and/or use is set to change. These are all elements that contribute to a historic district or area, and while a rezone should allow exiting non-conforming properties to be grandfathered in, new, conforming buildings will alter the existing character. As a part of the rezoning process, the city should consider the eligibility of buildings within the area and all potential contributing features.

Departmental Coordination

Preservation does not exist in a vacuum and should not solely be the responsibility of a single department. Historic structures impact and are impacted by economics, tourism, the sense of place, and building codes, to name but a few. Preservation should therefore be integrated into the decisions and procedures of other departments within the city. Additionally, the identification, evaluation, and preservation of municipally-owned properties should be integrated into the standard operating procedures of the city.[26]

Incentive Programs

A wide range of incentives exist for the preservation of historic properties. These are designed to promote preservation and alleviate the financial burden on owners wishing to restore, rehabilitate, or preserve the structures. Below is an overview of some of these programs; more information can be obtained by federal, state, local, and private historic advocacy and regulatory agencies. The Sarasota City Plan Historic Preservation Plan Action Strategy 3.4 recommends establishing a local economic incentives program, which currently does not exist.

Federal Financial Incentives and Programs

Rehabilitation tax credits are available from the federal government for the expenses incurred in the rehabilitation of an income-producing qualified historic building. The current 2017 Tax Reform law provides a twenty percent (20%) credit over five (5) years, or four percent (4%) per year for certified historic structures. The tax credit is only available to properties that will be used for a business or other income-producing purpose, and a "substantial" amount must be spent rehabilitating the historic building.

Low-income housing tax credit (LIHTC), enacted in 1986, provides for special relief for investors in certain low-income housing projects of historic buildings, and the federal Community Development Block Grant program permits the use of funds distributed as community block grants for historic preservation purposes, such as survey of historic resources.

State Incentives and Programs

The Florida Legislature has enacted several statutes designed to stimulate redevelopment in areas defined variously as blighted, slums, or enterprise zones. Since such areas are often rich in older or historic building stock, the statutes provide a major tool for preservation and rehabilitation. State incentives encouraging revitalization of areas defined as enterprise zones include the following:

The Community Contribution Tax Credit is intended to encourage private corporations and insurance companies to participate in revitalization projects. This credit explicitly includes historic preservation districts as both eligible sponsors and eligible locations for such projects. The credit allows a corporation or insurance company a fifty-five-cent refund on Florida taxes for each dollar contributed up to a total contribution of four hundred thousand dollars, assuming the credit does not exceed the state tax liability.

[26] This is in line with Action Strategies 4.1 and 4.2 of the 2008 Sarasota City Plan – Historic Preservation Plan.

Tax increment financing (TIF) provides for use of the tax upon an increased valuation of an improved property to amortize the cost of the bond issue floated to finance the improvement. Tax increment financing can effectively pay for redevelopment by requiring that the additional ad valorem taxes generated by the redeveloped area be placed in a special redevelopment trust fund and used to repay bondholders who provided funding at the beginning of the project. This device is often used in commercial or income-producing neighborhoods.

State and local incentives and programs encouraging revitalization not only of enterprise zones, slums, or blighted areas, but of historic properties in general include the reduced assessment and transfer of development rights provisions and, most notably, Industrial Revenue Bonds.

Amendment 3, enacted by Florida voters in November 1992, permits counties and cities to enacted legislation that offers property tax abatement to property owners who rehabilitate certified historic buildings. The legislation offers up to a ten-year tax abatement on certified improvements made to a historic property. Property owners of historic buildings in Sarasota should be apprised of the benefits of the legislation, which is available through the Bureau of Historic Preservation in Tallahassee.

Other incentives include (1) job creation incentive credits; (2) economic revitalization tax credits; (3) community development corporation support programs; (4) sales tax exemption for building materials used in rehabilitation of real property in enterprise zones; (5) sales tax exemption for electrical energy used in enterprise zones; (6) credit against sales tax for job creation in enterprise zones.

While many of the incentives and programs listed above appear directed toward areas defined as slums or blighted, preservationists cannot overlook the economic encouragement they offer for the rehabilitation of historic structures and districts falling within these definitions. Moreover, there are significant incentives among them which are available to historic properties and districts without regard to blight or urban decay. These prominently include the Community Contribution Tax Credit and Tax Increment Financing.

Private and Voluntary Financial and Legal Techniques

Financial incentives provide perhaps the most persuasive argument for historic preservation. Federal tax incentives for preservation, which have provided the major impetus for rehabilitation of historic buildings in the past decade, have recently experienced changes in the 2017 Tax Reform law. Although the 20% credit for rehabilitation was modified, it still appears to be an attractive investment incentive, particularly for owners who have depreciated their property over several years.

The State of Florida became increasingly active in historic preservation during the 1980s and accelerated its grants program in the closing decade of the twentieth century. It continues to spend more dollars on historic preservation than any other state in the nation. The Florida Department of State is responsible for dispersing state preservation dollars. It provides funding in the areas of acquisition and development; education; and survey and registration. The City of Sarasota should remain on the current mailing list of the Bureau of Historic Preservation and continue to apply for grants for appropriate projects, such as additional survey and registration projects, design guidelines, and publications. Any public or private agency or group in the city that requires current information on available loans, grants, and funding sources or programs for historic preservation is advised to inquire with:

Among the projects for which funding may be sought are surveys of architectural and archaeological resources, preparation of NRHP nominations, preparing a historic preservation ordinance and accompanying guidelines, completion of a Historic Preservation Element to the Comprehensive Plan, acquisition of culturally significant properties, rehabilitation of historic structures, and the publication of brochures, books, and videos on local heritage and architecture. There are also a variety of programs available for community development under the auspices of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A variety of legal and financial incentives and instruments are available for use by government and citizens to assist in preservation efforts. Some are already provided through federal or state law or regulations (detailed above); others must be adopted by a local government. In most cases, the instruments that local government and residents can employ in the preservation process are familiar devices in real estate and tax law.

Voluntary preservation and conservation agreements represent the middle ground between the maximum protection afforded by outright public ownership of environmentally significant lands and the sometimes-minimal protection gained by government land use regulation. For properties that are unprotected by government land use regulation, a voluntary preservation agreement may be the only preservation technique available. For other properties, government regulation provides a foundation of protection. The private preservation agreement reinforces the protection provided under a local ordinance or other land use regulation.

Because of federal tax considerations, the charitable gift of a preservation easement is the most commonly used voluntary preservation technique. A preservation easement is a voluntary legal agreement between a property owner ("grantor") and a preservation organization or unit of government ("holding organization" or "grantee"). The easement results in a restriction placed against the future development of a property. In use as a historic preservation instrument, the easement is usually placed with a non-profit organization that is qualified to maintain it over a period of time. Tax advantages are available for some easements. Federal law permits, for example, the donation of a facade easement for the purpose of preserving the exterior integrity of a qualified historic building. Scenic or open space easements are used to preserve archaeological sites.

IX. GLOSSARY & NOTES

The term integrity indicates that sufficient original building fabric is present to convey the property's historic and architectural significance. The NRHP breaks integrity into seven aspects or qualities: location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. The condition of a structure is not the same as the integrity.

In a roof kick, the slope of the roof continues past the overhang, as seen in Figure 111. It is differentiated from a shed (or flat) extension because the pitch of the primary roof is continued, as opposed to changing angles.

Where windows are referred to as replacement, it indicates the materials used are anachronistic. For instance, metal windows would be identified as replacement if they occurred on a building from 1920, but not on one from 1960, even if the 1960 windows were not original. The term does not refer to a specific material, although many of the structures surveyed with replacement windows were either vinyl or composition.

Window types identified in the survey include the following. Except for jalousie, they can have any number of lights (panes of glass); 1 and 6 light are common.

- Sash windows refer to vertically sliding lights (as seen in Figure 111).
- Casement windows are hinged on the right or left side.
- Awning windows are hinged at the top (hopper windows, which were not noted in the survey, are hinged at the bottom).
- Fixed windows are inoperable and do not open.
- Slider refers to windows with horizontally sliding lights.
- Jalousie windows contain thin slats that each hinge at the top and open in sync, similar to Venetian blinds.

If a line were drawn down the center of a building and each side looked the same, it would be identified as a symmetric façade (see, for instance Figure 23 and Figure 24). If they are not the same, it is an asymmetric façade.

The National Park Service lists four approaches to the treatment of historic properties. They are:

- Preservation, which focuses on maintaining and repairing existing historic materials and retaining the property's form as it has evolved over time
- Rehabilitation acknowledges the need to alter or add to a historic property to meet continuing or changing uses while retaining the property's historic character
- Restoration identifies a particular period in the building's history and removes evidence of other periods
- Reconstruction recreates vanished or non-surviving portions of a property for interpretive purposes

Common abbreviations used in the FMSF forms include the following:

- addn: addition
- ext: extension or exterior
- bldg: building
- encl: enclosed
- MCM: Mid-Century Modern
- MV: Masonry Vernacular
- FV: Frame Vernacular
- MT: Minimal Traditional
- Mid Trad: Minimal Traditional
- SSA: Sarasota School of Architecture

ESI made a best effort to identify any spelling errors in the FMSF forms, but any mistakes are unintentional.

If a structure's NRHP individual eligibility was noted as "insufficient information," it means the structure is likely eligible due to its high integrity and design, but more research is needed to make a final determination. "Insufficient information" marked under NRHP district eligibility means either the structure was obscured from the right-of-way or potential additions and/or alterations are integrated in such a way they are indistinguishable from the original form.

NRHP eligibility was evaluated based on whether or not the structure retains the ability to meet district criteria if a district were present. The evaluation does not take into consideration the eligibility of surrounding resources. Therefore, structures may be noted as appearing to meet the criteria for the NRHP as part of a district in areas where there is an insufficient concentration of potentially contributing resources to constitute a district.
